

Privacy & Cookies

Dundas is committed to ensuring the privacy and security of any personal information provided to us. The General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) gives us responsibility as a Data Controller in respect of how we collect and use any personal information gathered in the normal course of business.

Dundas does not manage portfolios on behalf of individuals. Its privacy policy covers information held about individuals who are acting on behalf of its institutional and professional clients only.

What we collect

We collect the standard information required to do business from sources such as emails, social media contact and business cards - names, job title, company and contact information.

What we do with the information

We will only use it to communicate with you in the normal course of business.

If further information is required to comply with regulatory duties, we will contact you for permission.

How long will we hold data for?

We shall follow the GDPR guidelines in respect of the period for which we hold any personal information provided.

Controlling your personal information

Vanessa Murchison, a Partner in the firm, is our Data Protection Officer. She can be contacted with any questions you may have. Her email address is vanessa@dundasglobal.com. Details of the data we hold maybe requested at any time. Personal data will be deleted if requested to do so. No data will be sold, distributed or leased to third parties.
